To Rupee or Not to Rupee

The rupee has dropped to approximately 64 against the United States Dollar. The British pound is now equivalent to more than 100 rupees.

India is in a state of policy paralysis and economic slowdown and the government is not doing much to resolve the situation. NDTV says that "The total market capitalization of all listed stocks in the country has fallen to $992 billion". This pushes India out of the elite global league of markets that have a trillion-dollar valuation. Since 2013 April, the rupee has depreciated by over 12 per cent and the value of the stock market has fallen by 4 percent. International credit rating agencies have rated India a BBB- with a negative outlook showing that India is being perceived as just above a "junk" status. Various monetary measures by the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) and the government have failed to fix this problem.

The rupee depreciation that we are seeing is the result of the gap in demand and supply in the Indian currency. The current market is one sided; most investors feel that this depreciation will continue which will result in the purchase of more dollars. The primary causes of the devaluation are high unemployment, a high current account deficit and public debt which are not being given as much importance as required. Foreign institutional investors are choosing America over India due to instability in the Indian Market, therefore reducing the foreign direct investment. A frail rupee will add to the rising import bill of the country and thereby increase its current account deficit. India's foreign exchange reserves are not substantial to cover the high current account deficit, forming the central problem of the Indian Economy.

So, what does this all mean for you?

The recent decline in the rupee will have an impact on not only the economy, but also on you as an individual. Your planned summer vacation abroad will be much more expensive. Travel, hotel and shopping costs are on the rise. Say goodbye to your Emporio visits for the latest Gucci bag, flying to London for those items may now be cheaper. College in another country may not end up being worth it as the exchange rate to acquire the foreign currency is unsatisfactory. Expenses at University like college fees and living expenses will shoot up and become a huge burden on the students. Imported goods like Oreos and cereal bars would be an indulgence only to be purchased once in a while. Grocery bills will rise for the common man due to accelerating inflation; the price of onion is now Rs 80 per kilogram. Fuel prices will rise so you will need to use public transport and carpool more often.

Additionally, every industry which is dependent on imports will have to face an increase in cost of production and operations. In order to nullify this increase, these companies will have to rationalise costs within their control. The easiest method of doing this is changing variable costs of the company such as labour. In this scenario a company can either downsize and hire less people, or reduce the salary for the existing human resources.

"This can eventually turn out to be either a vicious or virtuous cycle; that is in your power."

At the end of the day, the individual is drastically affected in each sector by the falling rupee. The state of the rupee is correlated to the state of economy. Since the government regulates the rupee, the citizens of India are indirectly responsible for the degradation of the rupee as they select the running government. This can eventually turn out to be either a vicious or virtuous cycle. That is in your power, in the power of the the common man.

An Unforgettable Experience

79 delegates. 26 schools. 13 countries. 1 summit. The best experience of my life! Words are not enough to describe all that we have learnt, all that we have felt and yet I try. The summit kicked off with an interaction with fellow delegates- people from all over the world, distinctly different, yet so similar. Games such as Whacko, Splat and Pictionary were the perfect ice breakers for us to get to know each other.

Through the course of the summit, there were many leading professionals who came to speak to us- Mr. Kausikan about Government, Mr. Baptiste about Science, Mr. Fernandez about media and so on. Apart from this, we also had student dialogues whereby we each elaborated upon a pertinent global problem and tried to suggest solutions for the same. These were discussions which spurred our thoughts, broadened our perspectives and taught us to be inquisitive and confident.

One of the major aims of the summit was to show us the inner working of the Singaporean system and hence, we began visiting organizations like the Supreme Court, GIC, Land Transport Authority, Housing Development Board and many more. These visits exposed the vast differences between our system and that of Singapore's and instilled in us the knowledge that India has a long way to go and to reach its destination, needs to combine top notch facilities with its historical respect for tradition and a major change in leadership.

And while we're on the topic of learning, we each also had an Arts Masterclass which taught us that to be an all rounded individual, one has to indulge in the arts and physical activities too. And so...we went Paintballing, Dragon Boating and Kayaking too! Not only did we acquire skills that we had never even imagined that we would acquire but we were also taught the importance of team work through loads of fun along the way.

The cultural exhibition where India's delicacies of 'Kaju Katli' and 'Milk cake' were an absolute hit was a unique activity that showcased the diversity that unites us all in a sense. We also had some bonding time with each other as we rehearsed for the Bollywood dance performance that was so typically over the top and so typically full of energy and fun!

Yet, the true essence of the summit lay in the friendships that we forged over the course of those ten days. It's amazing how people you haven't known since the beginning are suddenly so important that life is unimaginable without having met them! That feeling of anticipation when we boarded the bus every morning, knowing in our hearts that the day ahead would be just as unforgettable as the last one, was a remarkable one. I come back from the summit as a different person- one who moves beyond what the small picture looks like, to view the larger picture with clarity and one who takes failure better as opposed to earlier.

So, I would just like to conclude by saying that it has all passed me by way too quickly, and I wish it hadn't ended so fast, but I have a feeling that this wasn't the end, for the friendships I've made are here to last!

डी यू में हिन्दी का अधिरोपण

दिल्ली यूनिवर्सिटी दूसरी सेमेस्टर में हिन्दी सीखना सभी छात्र छात्रों के लिए अनिवार्य करना चाहती है। इसके कारण उत्तर पूर्वी व दक्षिण भारत के अध्येता व छात्र रोज़ाना "एच आर डी" के खिलाफ विरोध कर रहे हैं। मेरी राय में डी यू का यह "शैक्षिक सुधार" हमारे देश के अखंडता के खिलाफ है।

हिन्दी एक ऐसी भाषा है जो हमारे देश के केवल चालीस प्रतिशत जन जानते हैं। उत्तर पूर्वी व दक्षिण भारत में हिन्दी की प्रयोग बहुत दुर्लभ है। यह शैक्षिक सुधार उत्तरी और मध्य भारतीय छात्रों को एक नावाजिब फायदा देता है क्योंकि वे अचपन से ही हिन्दी जानते ही नहीं परंतु हिन्दी में संचार व्यवस्था भी करते हैं।

इसके साथ एक ही साल में एक नई भाषा सीखना व उभरकर परीक्षित होना बहुत कठिन है और दूसरे क्षेत्रों पर देशी दबाव डाल सकता है।

हिन्दी एक महत्वपूर्ण भाषा है परंतु यह भाषा किसी पर थोपा नहीं जा सकता।

Teacher of The Week: Mrs. Bakshi

1. If you had to pick, who would you say was your favorite student?

Though he graduated a while back, I would have to say Yaman Verma. Despite being headboy and being involved in so many activities he was always ready for class, he would often make me go outside the textbook, and challenged the subject constantly.

2. We know you've travelled a lot, which is the most exotic destination you've ever visited?

I would have to say Myanmar, because modernization and development hasn't reached there yet, and it's like a land stuck in time. The Caribbean was beautiful as well.

3. Describe your ideal holiday.

With family. The food must be fabulous, not too much sightseeing.

4. If you couldn't teach Political Science, what would you teach?

Maths! But only till class 10 I suppose.

5. How did you discover your love for music?

I was brought up in a Bengali household where all the children were expected to do SOMETHING artsy. Dancing was never an option for me, so I started music lessons when I was in class 2, and I've loved it ever since.

6. Favorite movie?

Chupke chupke, because it was so cute! Romantic movies like 'Silsila.' One movie I can watch again and again and never get tired of is 'Sound of Music.'

7. If you had to describe yourself in one phrase or line, what would you say?

I always try to develop empathy.

8. You studied first at LSR and then did a PhD at JNU. What advice would you give to your students who are hoping to stay in Delhi for higher education?

Don't look at Delhi just in terms of DU, look at it in terms of the city. See if it's a city that will help you grow. I always believe that what you can learn on your metro rides in Delhi, would be far greater than anything any college can teach you.

Unparalleled Joy

It's funny because when you're a child, you believe you can be anything you want to be, go wherever you want to go. There's no limit to what you can dream. You expect the unexpected, you believe in magic, in fairytales, and in possibilities. Then you grow older and that innocence is shattered and somewhere along the way the reality of life strikes and you're hit by the realization that you can't be all you wanted to be. You realize that you might have to settle for a little bit less or perhaps, a variation of the original plan.

A kindergartener's dream for the future would probably be to be an astronaut, an actor, or a teacher. Slowly, as you progress towards the days of your teens, these dreams get hidden underneath pressure, workload, and life, in general.

"Happiness lies in the small things in life. In opening unmarked doors, crossing untraveled paths, talking to strangers and taking wrong turns."

So much so, that 'Society' plays a huge role in our lives. 'What people might think' is the new question, as opposed to our happiness and satisfaction. Many say that happiness lies in the small things in life. In opening unmarked doors, and crossing untraveled paths, talking to strangers and taking wrong turns. It's easier to say and much tougher to do, but the secret to a life of adventure, a life of unparalleled joy lies in small, interesting choices along its course. Remember, that the future is in our hands; we shape our decisions and determine our own happiness. Living life with no regrets is the key to achieving your true, magical dreams and if not, then they're the key to achieving something even better.

Let Me In

I am housed in the same place
But there is an irony here-
I do not have the same face
Nor the teacher's chair-
I am sitting at the machine
Glued to the screen
As my heart saunter's off
Into the next room, thru the wall!!-
There- where my students wait
For their first lesson of the day
I sense their endearing forms
They follow me with their gaze
But a strange vacuum fills the air
And I can scarcely tell what they say-

I glide now into the corridor
Wont to pause- at the railing-
Where the creeper's shade
And laughter the children gave
Keep these flowers shining-
Suddenly, there is uproar-
Hey, is that knocking at the door?-
No, Mrs Srivastav, that just can't be-
The door has melted to the floor - see!
In its place, I perceive-
At the uprooted hinge-
A faintly familiar voice
Now flops- aimlessly-
Creaking into the wind-
Let-me-in- let-me-in

Top Five Reasons To Become an Indian Politician

5. No toll tax – When your car passes through the toll gate and you're asked to pay the amount, all you have to say is "How dare you ask me to pay?!" and then drive past with ease. You have the power; why not use it to demand your right? To learn how to do this expertly, you can contact Mr. Anil Kadam, Shiv Sena MP.

4. You can rightfully steal money – Let us say that you're assigned a budget to carry out a government plan such as the 2G Spectrum or maybe even the Commonwealth Games. You can actually take half of this budget, or maybe even more, and transfer it to your personal bank accounts overseas. Then maybe you can engage in visiting exotic holiday destinations while the rest of the country wonders what happened to the government plan and why it wasn't effective.

Warning: You might get caught with this one, but even then you can put off going to jail for a long time.

3. You can get statues of yourself built – Don't be jealous when you see statues of political leaders and heroes on the roads, of course you're equally deserving. With the ridiculous amounts of wealth you mysteriously acquire once you are elected, you can get statues of yourself built to make it look like the public loves you and will miss you when you're no longer there.

2. You are given license to display your immaturity – This one is probably one of the best benefits of the job. You can engage in a variety of behaviours ranging from lashing yourself with a whip in public to protest against the formation of Telangana, shouting during a Parliament session as if you were bargaining in Lajpat Nagar or even the other extreme – not speaking at all when your country needs you to. I'm just listing a few. You're free to do whatever you like because as an elected representative of the people, this is exactly the kind of behaviour required of you.

1. You become an expert in buying people's support – "Buying" doesn't necessarily refer to money. It can even include introducing Food Security Ordinances before elections to gain widespread support from the people, etc. But of course, money is important. You can use it to buy votes, hide important government files AND 'deal' with your rivals. These are just a few suggestions; feel free to broaden your horizon. After all, you were elected to do these very things.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES- This month is all about the new. New friends (because your old ones won't talk to you), new clothes (because you can no longer fit into your old ones) and a new personality (because you desperately need one). Try finding new interests and hobbies and basically anything that separates you from, well, being you.

TAURUS – You will find yourself feeling lonely or depressed this month. Schoolwork will become a huge burden and you will feel constantly overwhelmed. However, there is no light at the end of your hopeless tunnel. Prepare yourself for feeling hurt or feeling sad all the time, your troubles aren't going anywhere anytime soon.

GEMINI – You are going to be focused and inspired this month. Long term dreams and aspirations will be supported by people around you and you will do everything you can to achieve them. While your determination is credible, you should look at your dreams with a sense of reality. Obviously you're not going to achieve any of it, so chill out.

CANCER – Everyone is going to really nice to you this month, your conversations are suddenly going to interest others around you and people might actually stay in the same room as you. Don't be fooled, people don't like you now, they all just want something from you.

LEO – You're going to be more annoying than usual this month. You are going to become completely self obsessed (god knows why) and think only about yourself. Not that you were anything great before, but keep this attitude up, soon your only friend will your mirror and the reflection staring back isn't pretty.

VIRGO – You're all about optimism this month. You will radiate positivity and nothing is going to rain on your parade. Except that it will. No matter how much you smile or maintain a sunny disposition, bad luck will follow you everywhere. This month, forget the positivity and just make sure you don't die in an absurdly tragic way, like a blimp accident maybe.

BOSE®

Better sound through research®

I looked at my stereo today, just listening to the radio when for the first time I paid attention to the title embossed in white, BOSE. Today, the world is grieving the loss of a technological gem, a former student and professor at MIT as well as the founder and chairman of Bose Corporation, Amar Gopal Bose.

"His technology is used everywhere, in the home of an average family and even on NASA shuttles heading towards the moon."

Bose had always been interested in sound technology- he was able to fix radios and other everyday items even at a young age. One day during college, he bought a sound system and was disappointed by the quality. He then created the speakers required himself, and of course, paved the way for a 1.8 billion dollar company. Now? His technology is used all over the world and beyond- in the home of an average family and even on NASA shuttles heading towards the moon.

He was a tough teacher, some say, with challenging homework but was also extremely kind. It is said he never really timed his tests and the paper could go on till 5am until every child was done. Apparently, he would also give ice cream to the students to calm their nerves in the exam. Who would mind such a teacher?

I looked back at the radio in front of me, marveling at the wave technology, the blood sweat and grime that went into creating this small, sleek object; all because one man wanted to hear classical music in 'high definition'. His name will live eternally in history. Be it just in memory, or the US National inventor's hall of fame, right next to Alexander Graham Bell and the Wright Brothers.

It has many features to make it distinct,
Thanks to the poachers it's getting extinct.

Tigers once lived across Asia,
From Turkey in the West to East of Russia.

A tiger is as large as life,
Breezes through the jungle slicing like a knife.

He enjoys watching the animals as they graze,

His attack on the prey is worth a praise.

He attacks as quick as lightning,
To watch this show is very frightening .

His claws are as sharp as a razor,
Get into the prey's body acting like a tazor.
It walks to its prey as silent as the dead,
Just as they all fled.

The big cat sits as snug as a bug,
Only to be trapped by a big thug.

Of this stripy cat wish there were many as free as a bird,

Even after being shaved the pattern is preserved.

Colour like gold

Enough to keep you on hold

Roars like a thunder

Keeps everyone in wonder.

Preys like a warrior

Always remains superior

Walks like an emperor

All creatures remain in terror.

Attacks like lightning

Totally frightening

Jaws like a knife

Sharp enough to settle a strife.

Don't Snipe Save Life

Here is the tiger,
With it's coat of orange and black
stripes,
Dangerous and fierce,
It's sharp teeth can pierce.
Poaching is against the law,
They are looking for tiger bones and claws,
1700 tigers still remain,
To take care of the food chain,
We should tell people to stop cutting trees,
And make homes for them to sleep.
The tiger, the pride of our country,

Endangered by humans,
Feared by animals,
King of the jungle,
Is now in a real bungle.
Save the tiger,
They are dying day by day,
Soon all you'll have,
Is a tiger made of clay,
The environment is getting black,
As every day a tiger,
Is getting packed in a sack!!

Class IV - A

He's running!! He's running!!

As quick as lightning,
Behind the trees.

Is the tiger,
Rustling the breeze.

He's running!! He's running!!

Strong legs n brave,
With a body so sleek.

Gleaming stripes

Making everyone meek.

He's running!! He's running!!

As fast as a cheetah,
After his prey.

In the shadows is the tiger,
Demolishing his prey.

He's running!! He's running!!

To save his skin.

Teeth, paws and nails,
From the ruthless hunters,

But, in vain.

He's not running!! He's not running!!

Extinct from the earth,

We just see

His fossils and,

The time of birth.

Alone in the Dark

A spooky night,
My parents switched off the light.
It was time for bed,
My face was all red.
I thought there were ghosts,
A flying broom, all over my room.
The skeletons dancing rock-rock,
And the clock going tick-tock.
My finger bled,
Blood all over my bed.
Bats flying here and there,
Snakes on the floor everywhere.
I was so scared,
I jumped out of my bed.
I realized it was just a dream,
Otherwise I would really scream.

On Being Captain

'Listen up guys. This is a very important match for us, and excuses won't do. We all know very well what our job is so I'm not going to repeat that. What I do have to repeat is that play your game, don't get nervous and have fun. You guys are great, and we can easily win if we play the way we always do. So on the count of three, go Vasant Valley. 1, 2, 3!'

As a junior, these were the words of the captain, and these were the words that would get our blood racing every single time. I'd stand there in the huddle with the weight of those heavy arms on my weak shoulders. Those two minutes would seem like forever, but they were worth the pain.

"All you need to remember is, don't worry at all about who the other team is or what kind of players they have, concentrate on what you do"

The weight seems easier for me to bear, now that's it my turn to do the talking. From creating groups on Whatsapp and Facebook, to phone calls every day making sure people aren't finding excuses to skip the morning camps, this has been one of the best experiences of my life. What's more important than being a good captain, is being a good friend. Sometimes what team-mates need is not someone who can shout at them for falling down, but someone who can come pick them up, give them a pat on their back and tell them to keep going. I try my best to be that friend. Usually the team consists of players from class 9 onwards, so it does get tough to keep ones temper. There have been times when I have had no option but to scream my lungs out at them, but I try to compensate for it with a pat on the back once things get brighter.

We've been through a few losses this year. Unlike every year when I'd bow down my head in shame and cry a little, now I raise my head up high. I can't afford to cry anymore, bring the morale of the team down. There have been instances when I've wanted to cry along with every other team-mate, but instead I try to cheer them up, tell them how good a job they have done and how no one could have done it better. Being a captain has had a major impact on my life in more ways than one.

"This is my last year, and I don't want to play one single match where we haven't given it our best as a team, so do this much for me and every other senior here."

Every now and then when we take the field and 22 boots stamp their way to the huddle, I stand there with my arms wide open, and my arms must feel like a burden on the weak shoulders of the junior who stands next to me. Taking from all the years of listening in the same huddle, I've come up with my own version of the speech that has become so important to me over the years:

'Listen up guys. I don't need to tell you what to do cause there's no time for that right now. All you need to remember is, don't worry at all about who the other team is or what kind of players they have, concentrate on what you do. This is my last year, and I don't want to play one single match where we haven't given it our best as a team, so do this much for me and every other senior over here. Lets do this, so on the count of three, go Vasant Valley. 1, 2, 3!'

HOROSCOPES Contd.

LIBRA - This month, love is in the air for you. You will meet someone who you think is the "one". You will feel giddy about this person and think about them all the time. But before you start doodling hearts all over your notebook, you should know your love will not be reciprocated, infact your "one" will be rather repulsed by you.

SCORPIO - This month for you is extremely eventful, weddings, birthdays, the works. You decide to take initiative and be an active part in all the celebrations. However this is met, with aggressive responses. It is at this point that you need to realize, nobody cares about your opinion, go sit in the corner, have some cake and pipe down.

SAGITTARIUS - You are going to be extremely emotional and sensitive this month. Small comments are going to get to you and you will feel let down by everyone. Just remember life goes on so, stop crying and move on.

CAPRICORN - You will feel conflicted this month and be forced to make many decisions. You will believe in your best instinct and trust your gut. However this cannot be a worse idea. All the decisions you make will be the wrong ones and you will be stuck in horrible situations.

AQUARIUS - Your need to win and competitive drive will go crazy this month. You will try your best to beat everyone at everything. But tread carefully, trying to win everything can make you lose it all (lol jk it's not like you have anything to lose anyway).

PISCES - You're usually soft-spoken and polite- or in other words, invisible. This month, you'll find a newfound confidence and soon everyone will notice you. Except no one likes this new confident you. After getting hateful messages, you will soon go back to your invisibility.
